Also there is an article on the use of VPNs with Android. This uses TunnelBlick, that is also good. About Security Advancements in technology have opened up some really cool new ways to improve the security of your devices. Some of these include mobile security apps, data encryption apps, and VPN apps. I'm going to talk about what a VPN app is, what it is used for, and how it works. VPN stands for Virtual Private Network. A VPN encrypts your connection and lets you get around some of the problems with connecting to insecure Wi-Fi connections. This way, your connection is secured so that anyone that is watching your traffic or trying to access your information can't see what you are doing. A VPN is really good for getting around blocks when trying to access a web site from a country that has censored it. It allows you to get around this restriction because the information isn't sent over the open Internet. This is where VPNs really come in handy. If you are trying to get around the government blocking you from websites that are censored in a certain country, you will need to find an encrypted connection that works in that country. The Problem With Connecting So how exactly do you do this? Well, if you are trying to connect to a website in a country that is censored, you are going to need to connect to that site from a place that is not censored. This is why using a VPN is so important. This is also why it is so important that you get a VPN service that is free. If you are trying to get around a government, you don't want to pay for their service. How a VPN Works A VPN app will help you to get around those blocks. When you connect to a VPN, your connection is encrypted. All of the information that you are sending and receiving is encrypted so that no one can see what it is. It's important to note that the information
