For starters, the frameworks share a fairly similar architecture, which makes it fairly easy to integrate between the two. Let's dive in. Setting Up Ember CLI You'll first need to get a copy of Ember CLI. You can install it via RubyGems: $ gem install ember-cli Once you've installed it, make sure you add it to your Gemfile and run: $ bundle install A few more steps to get your Ember CLI project set up: $ rails new ember-api -m $ cd ember-api $ rails generate ember:install $ ember server This will create a new Rails project with Ember CLI included. If you're using a different kind of Rails project or an older version of Rails (less than 3.2), you'll want to add ember-cli-rails to your Gemfile : $ gem install ember-cli-rails To start your Ember CLI project, simply run: $ ember serve If you receive an error that looks like this: Unable to find application at /Users/mark/Sites/ember-api 1d6a3396d6
