The force-feed-me extension provides a variety of features and functionality. It runs as a background extension in Firefox. Every time you open a feed it will pause for 1 or 2 seconds and then open the desired feed or list the feed items. When the feed or item is finished opening it moves off to the right side. If you open a link to a feed you do not want to, you can just press the tab key and it will jump over to the feed. You can also type the name of the feed to open it or click on the feed icon. You can get a complete list of the feeds you subscribe to by pressing F3 or by clicking on the feed icon on the right side. You can select a different folder to save all your feeds to by pressing the menu button and selecting "Path to Location...", you can select any existing location. While you are watching the feed, the message area in the bottom left of the toolbar will display messages such as new feeds, feeds finished, feed items, or attachments, complete with HTML formatted code. The feed titles are saved and you can organize them however you want, by pressing the gear icon, selecting "RSS Managment...", and adding feeds, folders, or changing the feed titles as desired. RSSman is a simple and lightweight RSS reader for people who prefer Windows with an RSS Reader. RSSman Description: Download RSSman, and view, write, edit and delete all your RSS feeds from a convenient, easy-to-use interface. You can even add folders to your RSSman feed! Let RSSman update news items in a separate window. RSSman can update your news items and check the RSS feeds automatically. The RSS feeds can be read in the RSSman reader or in the RSSman itself with the Web Crawler. You can view RSS feeds, folders or news items that you have stored. RSSman also supports RSS 2.0 or Atom feeds. RSSman supports all common RSS types. The RSS feed processor extracts interesting news items, news headlines and news descriptions from the rss feed. You can download interesting news articles from RSSmen's Web Crawler. RSSman's Web Crawler supports the fetching of news items for a URL, or a local directory path. You can set a description for each news item, and set a title for each news article. RSSman also supports the posting of RSS feeds via HTTP POST to a
