Q: regex to match camel case string but allow '_' in the middle I've tried using a regex in javascript to match word characters, but I want to allow underscores in the middle of the string. For example: 'testTest' Should be matched as a match 'TsTt_s_' Should not be matched If I do this: /[a-zA-Z0-9_]/ Then it matches those two above, but I want it to match the last one. How can I do this? A: You can make sure that you also consume the '_'. Try: /^[a-zA-Z][a-zA-Z0-9_]*$/ And test it out here: Appeal to the Community SUMMARY. A team of Trakheia volunteer workers from the Greek Union of Hellenic Workers (GEUCN) have spent three weeks constructing 120 homes in Cusco for families whose homes were destroyed by the earthquake. Now that the first 120 homes are complete, the team has launched an appeal to the local community to support the remaining 1,200 homes. The sum raised will be used to pay for materials, including the tin roofs and windows that will be needed to complete the rest of the houses. A fully functioning weather station will also be installed so that the people of Cusco are better able to manage their own weather conditions.Q: clang and llvm are installed but still unable to work with c #include int main() { int i = 0; printf("%d ", ++i); return 0; } compiled with: g++ -c file.cpp clang-3.8 (tags/RELEASE_38/final) Target: x86_64-pc-linux-gnu Thread model: posix Got error messages: ld: warning: directory not found for option '-L/usr/lib/llvm-5.0.0/lib' ld: warning: directory not found for option '-L

I got a few beers and a (very small) plate of cheese fries and dined alone. I don't mind eating alone, but the small table was way too small for me to have a delicious night. That's where this post comes in. I ended up walking around the restaurant for a bit, grabbed my drink and thought, "Hey, what the heck… I have an hour to spare, I'm not hungry, I'll grab a small plate from the bar." It's at that point I realized that this was not one of the better Applebee's nights. The bar was filled with junior high girls, and most of them ordered the cheapest drinks. Even though I was 20 minutes away from my home, and Applebee's was a stop on my way home, I really just wanted to get back there to get out of there. The Applebee's experience is not always like that. I've been to a few over the past two weeks and all of them were packed. It never occurred to me that Applebee's would start to be a destination for the younger crowd. A place where I would end up in the middle of a mosh pit. Well, there it was. I ended up with a table of 12 year old girls (and one older boy), all wanting one of the special kids meals. I've noticed that these girls are the type that use their phones, and who read their messages at the same time, and it is the most annoying behavior
