The objective of this study was to present the results of palliative chemotherapy in a patient with unresectable transverse colon cancer. A 67-year-old man presented with a large (10 cm) transverse colon cancer in the sigmoid colon and metastatic disease to the level II and III lymph nodes, retroperitoneal and pelvic lymph nodes, peritoneal carcinomatosis, and multiple skeletal metastases. His performance status was 1. The patient received palliative chemotherapy with leucovorin and fluorouracil. After 8 courses of treatment, the patient's disease continued to progress. As his performance status declined, radiation was instituted to the area of maximum tumor burden, and hydroxyurea was initiated. The patient died of progressive cancer 26 weeks after diagnosis. Treatment and outcome are described.

Drywong, New South Wales

Drywong is a small town and rural locality in the Ulladulla Shire of New South Wales, Australia. At the, it had a population of 151. History The Drywong area is important in the local Aboriginal history for its marked connection to the Songhees people who used to live in the area. Most of their land is now set aside for the habitat park the Drywong Wetlands Conservation Reserve, developed by the NSW Department of Environment and Climate Change for the benefit of the local Songhees people. The first mention of the land that is now the Drywong wetlands is found in the Journal of Exploration of the Shire of Nelson, which states that on 4 February 1813 Charles Sturt and William Hovell

Q: How to upload a file to a blob in documentdb I'm trying to upload a file to a documentdb, this is my first time using documentdb, and I'm having trouble understanding how to do it. If I was upload a file to Azure Storage (how to do it) I do something like this.

```
var storageAccount = CloudStorageAccount.Parse( CloudConfigurationManager.GetSetting("StorageConnectionString"));
// this function is exeected as a task in the azure storage account var
client = storageAccount.CreateCloudBlobClient(); var container =
client.GetContainerReference("mycontainer"); var blob =
container.GetBlockBlobReference("myfile.txt"); blob.UploadText(File.ReadAllBytes("C:\\myfile.txt"), Encoding.UTF8, "myfile.txt");

So I'm trying something like this. My code is this:

var storageAccount = CloudStorageAccount.Parse( CloudConfigurationManager.GetSetting("StorageConnectionString"));
// this function is exeected as a task in the azure storage account var
client = storageAccount.CreateCloudBlobClient(); var container =
client.GetContainerReference("mycontainer"); var blob =
container.GetBlockBlobReference("myfile.txt"); using (var stream =
new MemoryStream(System.IO.File.ReadAllBytes("C:\\myfile.txt"))) { blob.UploadFromStream(stream, "myfile.txt", null, null, null, DateTime.Now, null, null, null); }

But I get an exception: System.ArgumentNullException: Value cannot be null.
