It is possible to perform multiple operations on the same layer, such as recolor, apply a filter, and even add text. Photoshop is pretty much the standard in the graphics industry and many still use the same method of image processing in their design work. You can add different effects to images, create frames, add filters, edit graphics, add text, and combine several images in a single file. The program includes many built-in brushes, adjustment layers, and masks that are quite useful. Photoshop has a resizing tool, a crop tool, a layers tool, an image editor, a camera raw editor and so on. The program has many built-in presets such as black and white, sepia, and more. The present invention relates to the field of protective clothing which is heated by a single battery powered heating device. More specifically the present invention provides a high output energy saving heating device for protective clothing in the form of water repellant, fire resistant garments. The general public is increasingly aware of the need to protect themselves from the dangers of carbon monoxide and smoke inhalation, and other sources of heat produced within enclosed vehicles. The consequences of this lack of protection have been witnessed in recent public events in which large numbers of people have been killed within enclosed vehicles as a result of fire. Previously, the only sources of heating for protective clothing, such as "fire suits", were internally contained heaters, either of the gas or electric type, which tend to be dangerous to wear for extended periods of time. More recently, however, although these approaches to heating continue to be used, there has been a marked move away from the use of such techniques for reasons, which include the risk of explosion, and in particular the fire risk. An improved heating device for protective clothing has been developed which overcomes the foregoing difficulties of the prior art by providing a small, lightweight, highly efficient heating device which can be worn by the user within the protective clothing itself and which operates to heat the garments or spaces within the garments so as to keep the wearer warm and protected. According to a first aspect of the invention there is provided an electrical heater for use with protective clothing comprising: a housing having an internal cavity in which an electrical resistance heater is enclosed; a power connection for being coupled to a source of electrical power, said housing being sized to encase a wearer's body; a dry battery located within said housing and being in electrical contact with said heater; means to control the supply of electrical power to said heater thereby regulating said resistance heater in accordance with a control algorithm; said resistance heater being controlled in accordance with said control algorithm in order to maintain a temperature within said cavity which maintains a wearer's body temperature above a predetermined minimum temperature; said housing being sized and shaped to be worn comfortably by the wearer inside the protective clothing and said cavity being sized and shaped to facilitate acclimatization of the wearer to the local environment. Preferably said control algorithm comprises a logic process which commands said heater to continuously deliver heat to said wearer, while generating within the control algorithm a number of possible states of duty and a number of operating and safety instructions. Preferably said housing comprises a power supply,
