Adding Special Effects You can add special effects to your custom brushes. In the following steps, we'll create a custom brush with the 3-D Look technique. Figure 10-3. Custom brushes are great for special effects. The brush that is used in the following steps is called "3-D Look." The left side shows the brush tip shape. The right side shows a close-up of a brush setting. 1. Choose New Brush from the Brush panel menu. Select 3-D Look. The Pen Settings dialog box opens. 2. Choose 3-D Look from the Pen panel list at the bottom of the dialog box. The dialog box closes and the Brush dialog box opens. 3. Click the Match Details button. The Brush Details dialog box opens, as shown in Figure 10-4 (top). Scroll down to the Color panel and select None. Scroll down to the Roughness panel and select Minimum. Scroll down to the 3-D Look panel, and select Raw 3-D. Scroll down to the Settings panel, and click OK three times. All the special settings that you've selected are now saved as part of your custom brush. Figure 10-4. You can add special effects to a custom brush, making it unique

What's New in the?

It's going to be a tough one for the Washington Capitals tonight as they attempt to hold on to home ice in Game 6 against the St. Louis Blues. The Blues are by no means a pushover by any means, but you'd have to think it would be a little easier to get in front of these fans if you won Game 6 on the road. That's what the Capitals have attempted to do all series, and it seems like it's paid dividends for them. Washington's top goal scorer Evgeny Kuznetsov went through his usual routine of talking to the fans before and after the game, and a little common sense from Kuznetsov before the game goes a long way toward making it easier for players to get in front of the crowd. "Be respectful to them," Kuznetsov said. "They're paying money and want to come here, so you have to do good job. But once you start … it's almost impossible to do." Video: Caps eliminated, begin offseason planning There is no reason for any player on the ice to do anything but respect the home fans, as Capitals coach Todd Reirden said after the game. "I think that is what is most important, and they are very appreciative of the environment," Reirden said. Despite the odds being against Washington, that environment is not what made them a team that could beat the Blues in seven games. The Capitals' experienced forwards and veterans made the difference in the series, and they will be sorely missed in the offseason. The fact that the Capitals have not eliminated themselves from the playoffs is going to be the biggest talking point, as was the game itself. Under normal circumstances, the Capitals would be back home for the series and looking forward to a Game 7, but those are certainly not normal circumstances. For the second time in three games, the Capitals found themselves on the wrong end of a 5-on-3 and they couldn't find a way to stop the Blues. "Anytime you get that through 2 minutes, you're going to beat us," Kuznetsov said. It's going to take a tremendous amount of character for the Capitals to bounce back in such an important Game 6, and there's no telling how the Blues will be for Game 6. On Thursday, Blues forward Brayden Schenn was asked if they were tired. "I don't know what
